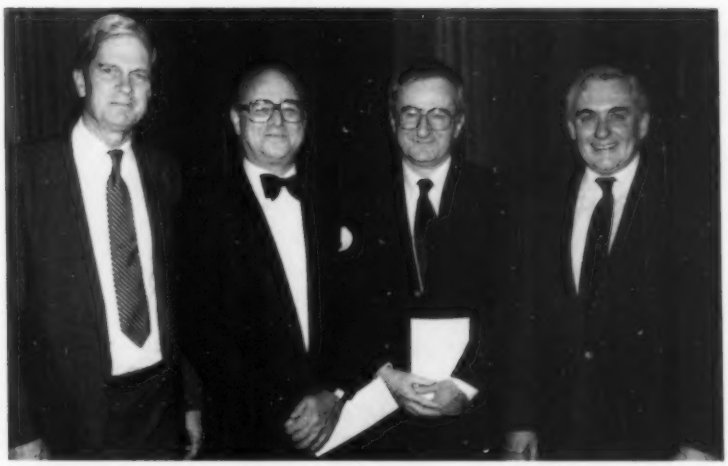
Library Announces Joint Project to Produce Definitive Recordings of Gershwin Works



Gathered to announce the new recording project are Librarian of Congress James H. Billington (left); Robert Krasnow, president, Elektra-Nonesuch Records; Robert Kimball, artistic advisor to the Gershwin estate; and James Pruett, chief, Music Division.

The Library of Congress, Mrs. Ira Gershwin (Leonore), and Elektra-Nonesuch Records have announced the creation of a project to record and document as fully and accurately as possible the musical theatre works of George and Ira Gershwin—their joint collaborations as well as Ira's work with others. Called the Leonore Gershwin-Library of Congress Recording and Publishing Project, it will have as its components the production of complete recordings, with extensive annotations, of works by the Gershwins, and the publication of critical editions of the music. Recording will begin in the fall of 1989.

The announcement of the establishment of the project coincides with the 50th anniversary of the association between the Gershwin family and the Library of Congress. To date, only two Gershwin scores have been recorded in their entirety—the opera "Porgy and Bess" (1935) and the Pulitzer Prize-winning musical satire "Of Thee I Sing" (1931).

The recordings to be made by the new project will be released and distributed by Elektra-Nonesuch. They will be authentic, complete, and faithful to the style of the era in which the works were created. Whenever possible the recordings will use the original scores and parts, which are now in the George and Ira Gershwin Collection in the Library of Congress, including items discovered in the Warner Brothers warehouse in Secaucus, N.J., in 1982.

Each recording will be accompanied by a booklet with the complete lyrics as well as a detailed history of each work. The recordings will be followed by the publication of a scholarly edition of the piano-vocal score, prepared under the direction of the Library of Congress and Warner-Chappell Music, the Gershwins' publishers. In addition, whenever possible, each work to be included in the project will be presented in concert at the Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress.

The inaugural event of the project was a May 22 concert of music and lyrics by George and Ira Gershwin in the Coolidge Auditorium.

The following titles will be the first issued in the project: "Girl Crazy" (1930) by George and Ira Gershwin; "Michael Feinstein Sings Unpublished Gershwin"; "Lady in the Dark" (1941) by Kurt Weill and Ira Gershwin, with book by Moss Hart; "Pardon My English" (1933) by George and Ira Gershwin; "Strike Up the Band" (1927 and 1930 versions) by George and Ira Gershwin; and "Primrose" (1924) London musical by George and Ira Gershwin and Desmond Carter.

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin is issued weekly by the Information Office of the Library of Congress and distributed free of charge to publicly supported libraries and research institutions, academic libraries, learned societies, and allied organizations in the United States.

Comparable institutions and organizations in other countries may arrange to receive the Bulletin on an exchange basis by applying in writing to the Library's Exchange and Gift Division. All other correspondence should be addressed to the LC Information Bulletin, Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540.

Computer Donated To Machine-Readable Collections Reading Room

An Osborne I microcomputer, together with documentation and 25 software programs, has been donated to the Library of Congress by Mark McBride of Silver Spring, Md., for use in the Machine-Readable Collections Reading Room.

This is the first hardware donation specifically received for the Machine-Readable Collections Reading Room, and it will be particularly useful as the Osborne's operating system, Control Program for Microprocessors (CP/M), provides a means to read and examine 8-bit programs. Though no longer manufactured, the Osborne I played an important role in the early development of the microcomputer industry in the United States. This generous gift supports the Library in its goal to acquire and provide research access to all forms of machine-readable materials.

Manufactured between 1981 and 1983, the Osborne I was the first truly portable microcomputer, combining a Z80 central processing unit, a CP/M operating system, 64K (kilobytes) of memory, and two

Library of Congress In the News

A new publication from the Library, Respectfully Quoted: A Dictionary of Quotations Requested from the Congressional Research Service (U.S. Government Printing Office, stock no. 030-001-00116-4, $29), has generated considerable media interest. First notice appeared in the New York Times, with additional coverage in U.S. News and World Report, Insight magazine, the Associated Press, and the New York Daily News. Editor Suzy Platt was interviewed by Susan Stamberg for National Public Radio's "All Things Considered."

First Lady Barbara Bush visited the Library to read to a group of Head Start children in her capacity as honorary chair of the "Year of the Young Reader" national campaign. The event was covered by the Washington Times, Wilson Library Bulletin, USA Today, Publishers Weekly, and the Associated Press. During her visit Mrs. Bush also taped a video message promoting reading, for use on major television networks.

Librarian of Congress James H. Billington was interviewed for the CBS "Nightwatch" program that aired May 2.

On the international front, George Atiyeh, head, Near East Section, African and Middle Eastern Division, participated in a USIA WORLDNET interactive video production with participants in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia; Rabat, Morocco; and Doha, Qatar. Also for USIA WORLDNET, Cole Blasier, chief of the Hispanic Division, and Georgette M. Dorn, specialist in Hispanic culture in the same division, were interviewed about the Library's collections by participants in Guatemala City, Guatemala; Managua, Nicaragua; and Bogotá, Columbia.

Nippon Television of Japan produced a feature on the Library with special emphasis on the Asian Division. Ronald Morse, the Library's development officer and an Asian expert, was interviewed for that program and appeared on a live satellite Fuji Sankei show featuring U.S.-Japan high-technology issues.

A reporter for the Journal do Brasil visited to prepare a major feature on the Library.

Teachers, Librarians To Participate in Educators' Institute

Librarian of Congress James H. Billington announced on June 1 that 30 teachers and librarians from across the country have been selected to participate in the Library of Congress' study program, "Educators' Institute to Study the United States Congress" in Washington, D.C., July 10-21.

The Library developed the Educators' Institute as part of its innovative two-year program to showcase the Library's vast resources and demonstrate its commitment to national education outreach. The program coincides with the Library's celebration of the bicentennial of the Congress and was made possible in part by Commodore Business Machines, Inc.

Participants in the Educators' Institute were selected from a pool of more than 100 applicants. Selection was based on their record of achievement as educators; the commitment of their respective institutions to develop programming; and their plans for using their experience at the institute to enrich local education. Many participants represent communities in which the traveling exhibition will be displayed.

Dr. Billington said participants will have the opportunity to study the development of the U.S. Congress, examine landmark Congressional decisions, and learn more about the Members who have shaped Congress throughout its history. They will join scholars, senior analysts from the Library's Congressional Research Service, other Library staff members, and master teachers in examining Congress through primary sources, publications, and multimedia collections available only at the Library of Congress.

"The Congress is one of our least understood and least studied institutions of government," Dr. Billington said. "We hope that the opportunity to work directly with original source materials and their contact with experts on Capitol Hill will help the institute's participants gain a better understanding of the Congress which they can pass on to their students."

Participants will receive three continuing-education credits from the Catholic University of America and a special Library of Congress Institute certificate, free classroom materials, and a stipend of $200.

The following is a list of the names and hometowns of those selected to participate:

Arizona: Margaret Loghry, Lee Instructional Resource Center, Tucson; Edie Wingate, Sahuaro High School, Tucson. California: Mark Elinson, Lincoln High School, Los Angeles; Chris Gutierrez, Jefferson High School, Los Angeles; Susan Laskey, A. Eminescu Exhibit At the Library

Mihai Eminescu (1850–1889), the national poet of Romania, is the subject of a display in the European Reading Room from June 1 through July 31. The display features books by and about Eminescu that are held by the Library of Congress, but includes examples of sheet music for Eminescu poems that have been arranged for voice and piano, and an album of photographs pertaining to the poet's life and works.

The display, commemorating the 100th anniversary of the death of Eminescu, also gives an indication of the diversity of this creative artist, who was a journalist, prose writer, drama critic, and librarian. His lasting fame, however, rests with his poetry and mastery of the Romanian language.

The European Reading Room hours are Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

single-density, single-sided (90K) floppy-disk drives in a compact carrying case. While its built-in five-inch screen limited the display to 52 characters, connectors for parallel and serial interfaces permitted the use of an external monitor and printer.

The CP/M operating system developed in 1975 by Digital Research became the standard for microcomputer hobbyists, who were the mainstay of the personal computer market in the late 1970s and early 1980s. Adopted by several hundred personal computer (PC) manufacturers, CP/M was the most popular operating system for PCs until the advent of MS-DOS (Microsoft Disk Operating System). The spectacular success of the Osborne Computer Corporation (net revenues of $100 million within two years) was due, in large part, to the software that was bundled with each unit: MBASIC (Microsoft); CBASIC (GORDON EUBANKS); Wordstar (MicroPro); and SuperCalc (Socim). Osborne user groups are still active even though the company declared bankruptcy in 1983.

The Library of Congress actively collects microcomputer programs and data files issued on a microcomputer, compact discs, or videodiscs and seeks the donation of new or superceded programs and data files and the equipment necessary to provide access to them.

Machine-readable materials are available for research use in the Machine-Readable Collections Reading Room, located in Room 140G of the Jefferson Building. The hours are 12 noon to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The reading room has been established as a one-year pilot project, the purpose of which is to determine the best way to provide research and bibliographic access to software and machine-readable data in the Library of Congress' collections. For more information contact John Kimball, General Reading Rooms Division, (202) 707-6560.

Ellen Hahn Named Acting Special Projects Officer

Ellen Hahn, chief, General Reading Rooms Division, Research Services, and since January 1988 on detail to the Office of The Librarian as chair of the Management and Planning (MAP) Committee, has been named acting special projects officer.

The special projects officer is a staff advisor to The Librarian for special projects and other management concerns and advises The Librarian as well as department heads and other managers on current and projected operating programs. Ms. Hahn will also oversee the transition activities of the Special Projects Office.

Austrian Author, Actor, Von Starhemberg Reads at the Library

Heinrich von Starhemberg, Austrian author and actor, visited the Library of Congress on May 15.

During his visit, Mr. Starhemberg recorded for the Library's Archive of World Literature on Tape, reading excerpts from his works in German and Spanish, including, "Trilogie der Freiheit," "Diegieto. Der Junge am Strand," and "El Cristal Roto." Mr. Starhemberg donated two volumes of his most recent plays to the Library's collections.

Mr. Starhemberg, who emigrated with his parents to Argentina and Chile in 1938, returned to Austria in 1955. Currently he resides in Madrid, Spain. Mr. Starhemberg was accompanied by Ferdinand Trauttmansdorff, counselor, cultural affairs, Embassy of Austria, and by Charles T. Mayer, president, Foreign Policy Discussion Group, Washington, D.C.

Rodney V. Burbach, M.D., Joins Library Staff as Consultant in Psychiatry

Rodney V. Burbach, M.D., joined the staff of the Library of Congress on April 1 as consultant in psychiatry.

Dr. Burbach will offer consultation to the Employee Assistance Program and provide psychiatric evaluations and consultation for staff members. He will also offer educational programs in the areas of mental health, stress, addictions, and substance abuse.

Dr. Burbach earned his M.D. in 1968 at Loma Linda University School of Medicine, Loma Linda, Calif., and did residencies in psychiatry at Duke University Medical Center, Durham, N.C., and Letterman Army Hospital, The Presidio, San Francisco, Calif. Following his residencies, he came to the Washington, D.C., area to do research on narcotics addiction at Walter Reed Army Institute of Research.

He is certified by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology and is a diplomate of the American Medical Society on Alcoholism and Other Drug Dependencies.

In addition to conducting a private practice, Dr. Burbach serves as a clinical instructor at Georgetown University School of Medicine. He is medical director of the Addiction Treatment Center at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, Md. His face and voice are familiar to many Washingtonians from public service announcements on alcoholism in the Washington Post and on several local radio stations.

Dr. Burbach is also a member of the American Medical Association, the Washington Psychiatric Society, and the American Psychiatric Association.

Dr. Burbach is available for confidential consultations on Thursdays from 9:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. in the Staff Relations office. Appointments may be scheduled by calling the Staff Relations Office Employee Assistance Program, ext. 76361, or by visiting Room LM 636.

Staff Members Walk For Federal Fitness Day

The Health Services Office entered two teams in the 1989 Federal Fitness Day-3K Fun Walk on April 28.

The following staff members volunteered to walk the 1.86 miles: Joseph Bell, Protective Services; Sandra M. Charles, M.D., Health Services; Esther Davis, Central Services; Valerie Bailey Ellis, Health Services; Keith Gilmore, Recruitment and Placement; Otis McClees, Copyright Examining Office; Trecolia Montgomery, Health Services; Jane Roberts, Health Services; Leonard Scott, Counsel for Personnel; Joan van Blake, Labor Relations; and Leonard Waters, Cataloging Distribution Services.

Library Kicks Off Savings Bonds Campaign

The Library held its annual Savings Bonds Kick Off Rally in the James Madison Memorial Hall on May 23. John Kozar, the campaign's vice chair, opened the rally by thanking all keyworkers for their willingness to make the 1989 campaign a success. Librarian of Congress James H. Billington also commended the keyworkers for their commitment to the program and emphasized the many benefits of savings through bonds. Following Dr. Billington's remarks, Mr. Larry Felix, U.S. Savings Bonds Program, Department of the Treasury, presented an informational session and answered questions from keyworkers. Finally, the campaign film was previewed.

This year's campaign theme is, "Building Security, Fulfilling Dreams." The campaign will run officially between May 23 and June 23. During this period all Library staff members will be contacted by their keyworkers, who will discuss the advantages of buying bonds or, if they are currently buyers, of increasing their allotments through a payroll deduction process. The current rate of interest on bonds is 7.8 percent effective through October 31.

Change in BPS/FETCH

Effective immediately, Book Paging System/FETCH will not accept requests through SCORPIO or MUMS before 8 a.m.

Requests that come through the system earlier than 8 a.m., when Book Service staff members arrive, print out repeatedly each hour.

The elimination of these repeated orders will enable more timely responses to BPS/FETCH requests.

Hundreds Participate in Sixth Annual Wellness Fair

Miriam Birmeil, R.N., family nurse practitioner, takes the blood pressure reading of a Library staff member.

Twenty-seven different organizations shared their enthusiasm and information with more than 650 Library staff members at the Sixth Annual Wellness Fair held on May 9 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Mumford Room.

The Wellness Fairs are sponsored by the Health Services Office, and are designed to present information to staff members on how to maintain their health and prevent illness.

As part of this year's fair, cholesterol testing was offered. Some 230 staff members participated, receiving their results later at the Health Services Office where they also received literature and counseling on cardiovascular disease risk factors. The staff members of the Health Services office were very pleased with the level of participation in the cholesterol screening.

The co-chairs—Jane L. Roberts, R.N., occupational health nurse, and Miriam Birmiel, R.N., family nurse practitioner—and their committee spent three months organizing the fair and enabling it to be a success.

Staff Activities

Constance Carter, head, Science Reference Section, Science and Technology Division, participated in the New Hampshire Library Association's centennial celebration, May 1-3, in Manchester, N.H. Her talk, "Science Reference—the Practical Side," included suggestions and strategies for meeting the scientific and technical needs of varied constituencies, as well as a review of new science and technology reference works and information resources.

More than 1,000 copies of the Science and Technology Division's LC Science Tracer Bullet titles were distributed to librarians at this program and at Ms. Carter's workshop on science fair projects.

William R. Nugent, assistant director for research, Automated Systems Office (ASO), was invited by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to be one of six speakers at the annual consultative Meeting of Liaison Officers of IAEA's International Nuclear Information System (INIS). The IAEA is an independent intergovernmental agency operating under the aegis of the United Nations concerned with promoting the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. INIS is the information arm of IAEA, and its liaison officers represent 74 member countries and 14 international organizations.

STAFF NEWS

Mr. Nugent's talk was titled, "Optical Storage Technologies and Potential Applications at the International Nuclear Information System." He described the basics of optical recording and the variety of optical disks currently available, gave a brief status report on emerging international standards, and discussed possible applications at INIS.

IAEA currently employs several former employees of the Library of Congress with whom Mr. Nugent spoke, including Harriet Zais Gabbert, director of the Vienna International Centre Library, and Robert J. McDermott, systems analyst for INIS.

Donald G. Shomette, visual information specialist, Central Services Division, was honored by a reception on May 16 at the Washington, D.C., residence of The Ambassador of the Netherlands to the United States. The occasion, hosted by Ambassador and Mrs. Richard H. Fein, was held to mark the publication of Mr. Shomette's recent book, Raid on America: The Dutch Naval Campaign of 1672-1674. The work, co-authored with Robert D. Haslach, was released earlier this year by the University of South Carolina Press in its new series, Studies in Maritime History. A formal presentation of the work was made by the authors to the Commander in Chief of the Royal Netherlands Navy, Vice Admiral C.H.E. Brainich von Brainich Felth.

Stephanie Smith, analyst in American national government, Congressional Research Service, spoke at the Second Annual Conference on Federal Advisory Committee Management, May 18-19. Ms. Smith participated in a panel discussion on Presidential commissions and their effect on the Federal decision-making process. The conference was sponsored jointly by the General Services Administration and the Administrative Conference of the United States.

Edna Brown Titus Dies

Edna May Brown Titus, who retired from the Library in the mid-1960s, died on March 1.

Mrs. Titus was head of the Serials Section in the Descriptive Cataloging Division from the early 1940s until 1959. She then became editor of the third edition of the Union List of Serials, a special project which was completed in 1965.

Mrs. Titus is remembered by her colleagues as a dedicated librarian who worked hard to increase the quality of the work in the Serials Section. While editing the Union List, she was known to stay at the Library into "the wee hours," sometimes working until 1 a.m.
